A PAPAL FLYING FIELD
RUSSIA'S SLAVE LABOR.
SAFE FROM VOLCANOES.

By Arthur Brisbane
(Copyright 1930 By King Features

Many things have been done by the Popes important to human beings everywhere. They have encouraged the arts, and the world owes to them its greatest pictures, statues, buildings. They established Europe's first universities and sent missionaries exploring and civilizing among Indians of our great lakes and the Chinese in Asia.

The present Pope now appears as a friend and promoter of aviation, and in a most important direction.

Within the limited Vatican city territory allotted to the Papacy, Mussolini, there is not room for a full sized aviation field. The Pope therefore, will encourage development of the helicopter, that rises and lands perpendicularly and will have a small helicopter airport.

This is important to scientific aviation, and will enable the Pope at any time to leave Papal territory for any destination without entering upon territory that may become hostile.

The League of Nations labor bureau gives information about labor conditions in Russia. All jobs are obtained through government agencies. Any workman can quit by giving seven days notice.

But if he does quit he is called an industrial "deserter" and for six months after he quits although he may be a highly skilled man, the government gives him nothing to do but manual labor. Then he is reinstated.

This is Russia's much talked of "slave labor." It certainly is not "free labor" as the western world understands it.

However, Russia considers industrial success a matter of life and death, as western nations consider military success a matter of life and death.

In a military crisis we sent three billion men to Europe without asking their permission, and if one deserted the punishment was something worse than a job at manual labor. It was death.

Russia considers industrial triumph as important as military triumph.

Russian labor conditions horrify us, because they are new. We take it for granted that a boy of 18, tired, exhausted by a long march and going to sleep on sentry duty should be put to death. It's all a matter of custom.

We should be humbly thankful for a country free from volcanic activity.

It is difficult to imagine the horror of a recent eruption in Java that killed 15 natives at work in the fields. Imagine a stream of red hot lava, 600 feet wide, 70 feet high, rolling down upon you, filling valleys, covering villages.

Or imagine the sight that met the eyes of terrified villagers: the volcanic peak covered with a heavy black cloud, intense flashes of lightning shooting through it.

The lava flow changed fertile fields to desert. Do you wonder that nature frightened men in the daily days, causing them to invent tormenting devils, and strange gods different to their welfare.

TOOK ONE MONTH

HOLLYWOOD, CAL., Dec. 20.—Senate has been in session almost a month, and just yesterday passed the very bills that President Hoover suggested in the first hour that it met. They could have passed 'em the second hour, but no, that wouldn't give 'em a chance to denounce.

A foreigner coming here and reading the Congressional Record would say that the president of the United States was elected solely for the purpose of giving a senator somebody to call horse thief, and the dumb part about it is they have played right into the president's hands, for there is nothing the people believe in any more than someone the Senate is denouncing.

Six months like that and Hoover would be elected by acclamation.

OF INTEREST TO OHIO

The recent report of the national crime commission on the medical aspects of crime is of special interest to Ohio. This state is one of seven honor states mentioned in the report; that is, one of the seven states well equipped along psychiatric lines. In addition, one of the two cases studied in detail by the subcommittee in determining its recommendations occurred in Ohio, the Remus case in Cincinnati. It is classified along with the Leopold case, as one of the nation's worst violations of "expert testimony" in capital cases. Four recommendations are made in the report, seeking to codify psychiatric practice in courts and prisons and to extend the ability of the judiciary to weed out for special treatment "mental" cases coming before them.

The report recommended that each state establish as rapidly as practical appropriate institutions for the various types of offenders, in order that a greater degree of classification may be possible.

Establishment of psychiatric clinics is urged for the larger courts, supplementary to state facilities, which would be available for the smaller courts. This recommendation is made to enable each court to have a competent psychiatric service available, eliminating the slipshod method of "pickup" service.

Another recommendation, closely allied with the preceding one, concerns extension of the principle of indeterminate sentences and the discretion of judges in disposing of "mental" cases.

The last recommendation urges that each state adopt a law similar in principle to that one known in Massachusetts as the "Briggs Law," which provides for impartial and routine examination under state authority of persons held on criminal charges. Realizing the obvious comment on this recommendation the report states its belief that a trained psychiatric personnel, while inadequate in numbers at the present time, would arise to meet the demand were the principles of the Briggs law adopted by other states.

The specific recommendations and general tone of the crime commission committee's report are in complete harmony with recommendations made by prison wardens and investigation commissions. There is a growing realization of the close relationship of crime to mental conditions; and increasing conviction that the criminal should be regarded as a patient as well as one who has wronged society. A crime is an act committed with intent to contravene the law, and intent is a state of mind. If the mind of an offender is afflicted with disease, therefore, there can be no crime because the offender is not free to form an intent. It is an important step in the development of society's attitude toward crime. The national crime commission's report and its recommendations are likewise, an important part of the effort necessary to establish machinery to handle criminal cases under the new conception.

THE CHRISTMAS SPIRIT

The Christmas spirit works in strange and wondrous ways. In the national congress at present it bids fair to loosen up the jam against the legislative dam, despite last-minute stands in defense of disputed points.

Senators and Congressmen are anxious to be on their way back to family and fireside for the holidays. It is reported. They feel that Christmas would be more enjoyable if they could be relieved of worry, particularly worry over unemployment legislation now awaiting their final action. Nothing could be more natural than to move it out of the way, to break the jam by cooperative action. The country would welcome such action as a bona fide manifestation of Christmas spirit, and would ask no questions.

The house administration forces already have bowled over the opposition on the $30,000,000 drought relief bill and have passed their original bill by a vote of 359 to 6. In addition they have succeeded in throwing out an amendment making drought relief loans available for purchase of personal food. Both are creditable victories for Republican leadership.

In the senate, administration Republicans gained enough Democratic votes to release the $116,000,000 emergency construction bill from an amendment removing the president's authority to allocate funds from one category of projects to another. It was an amendment which Mr. Hoover disliked particularly.

The pledge of cooperation made some weeks ago by prominent Democrats is novel no longer; in fact, it has been greatly discredited. But results that good intentions failed to accomplish may fall in line more quickly to Christmas spirit. It promises to do so, unless the complexion of Congress changes before the holiday adjournment.

What Others Say

Once More A Gold Rush
From out of the Far West there comes once more the news of a gold rush. Men are abandoning more prosaic activities to hasten into the Rabbit Hole diggings, on the southern rim of Nevada's "Black Rock" desert, lured by the sight of rich ore brought down to the railroad town of Lovelocks by two prospectors.

Time will determine whether the find in the Rabbit Hole means only the new mine or a great new field, comparable to that opened a quarter of a century ago by the discovery of gold in the Humboldt region, around Goldfield, Tonopah and Bullfrog, far to the south. In the interior mountain country there are doubtless extensive deposits of mineral wealth yet to be uncovered. However, the fact that this new find is in the old Humboldt region, pretty well combed over by prospectors in the last seventy-five years, prompts the suspicion that the Rabbit Hole ore is limited in quantity.

But in America is to see a new rush for vast stores of gold that really exist, it is particularly fitting that the scene be Nevada, the state that has figured picturesquely in the popular fancy as the right place to look for precious metals, ever since Mark Twain first told the story of his own youthful experiences in the Virginia City diggings.

Indeed, the place names of Nevada speak eloquently of man's hunt for gold and silver, a quest sometimes successful but more often futile. Goldfield and Silver City are ghosts of great days on the Washoe slope. Goldend and Galena are hamlets whose labels must mean that men, once upon a time, at least believed there was rich ore around. Gold Mountain lies to the south of Goldfield, and Gold Center to the east of Bullfrog, on the edge of the great Southern desert. Diamond, Eureka and Ruby Hill cluster at the outer end of a railroad spur thing down through the Pine Creek valley. Bullionville may be named for a treasure trove of the long ago, or only a hope.

Eldorado canyon lies below Boulder canyon in the Colorado river. Silver Peak and Silver Creek are rhyming hamlets a hundred and fifty miles apart. Without a doubt three is still gold, and silver too, in the Nevada hills. But how much of it has been found at Rabbit Hole remains to be seen—Minneapolis Journal.

The Stars Say—

For Sunday, December 21
Sunday's horoscope holds promise of very lively situations but many that may be deemed unfavorable or unprofitable. There are many signs of hazard and disagreements in practical affairs, so the injunction is to attend to mystical and cultural activities exclusively.

Those whose birthday it is are appraised of a year of probable frustration and disappointment, with many impediments to progress and adverse conditions generally prevailing. There may be much activity and change. A child born on this day should be quick and clever and also indurated and dependable, but it should be given an excellent education to fit it to overcome many obstacles and trials in life.

For Monday, December 22
Monday's astrological forecast is for a preponderance of interest in the affairs of the heart and home rather than business activities. These will engage the attention or those businesses concerned in these departments of life. However employment is under beneficent auspices and the personal popularity and influence may be instrumental in winning honors, preferment or some promotion.

Those whose birthday it is are at the threshold of a year of much social domestic or romantic activity and prosperity. A child born on this day should be kindly amiable, gracious and friendly and should win popularity in social life and in employment, mainly through these humane qualities and talents. It should be artistic and cultured.

HEALTH

Diphtheria Preventable

Recently, the Diphtheria Commission of the Department of Health of New York City issued an uncomfortable statement. It is to the effect that diphtheria will probably be more prevalent this Winter than it has been for several years.

This warning should be sufficient to prevent such a calamity. Diphtheria is a terrible disease, as anyone who has come in contact with it can bear witness. But it is preventable, and there is no reason why every child should not be protected against it.

Although diphtheria is extremely contagious, some people will never take it. They are safe, no matter how often they may be exposed. Such persons are said to be "immune." This immunity increases with age, so that only a small proportion of the adult population is in danger of contagion.

But with small children the case is different. Very few of them are naturally immune but fortunately all of them can be made so. The risk of infection is so great, and the consequences so serious, that every child should be tested to find out whether he is susceptible. If he is, he should be given the treatment necessary to overcome the condition.

The procedure for finding out whether there is immunity is simple. It is known as the "Schick test," and consists of injecting into the outer layer of the skin a tiny drop of toxin.

If there is no reaction, the person is immune. But if the spot turns red and stays red for a week or so, looking rather like a mosquito bite, it means that the person is not immune. In that event he should be given injections of toxin-antitoxin to create immunity. The toxin-antitoxin treatment is easy and harmless. Three injections are given, a week apart, and within six months complete immunity develops. There are no serious after-effects to be feared—no excuse why any child should not be treated.

Sometimes, the immunizing injections are given at once. In this case, the preliminary Schick test is avoided.

The toxin-antitoxin treatment is diphtheria was one of the great achievements of modern medicine. By its use the toll of the disease was cut down to one-third of the former figure. Its universal use would win a few years wipe out diphtheria entirely.

Whether this result can be achieved depends on what can be done with the very young children. The disease is most deadly among those less than five years old—the preschool age. They should be immunized as soon after the age of six months as possible.

But whether this desirable end can be reached depends almost entirely on the parents. The Department of Health of the City of New York has made it as easy as possible for every child to be given the proper attention yet less than a quarter of the children under ten years of age have been immunized. Until every child in every community is reached, we should not rest content.

Answers to Health Queries

J. R. Q.—What causes cold hands and feet?

A.—This is usually due to poor circulation. Build up the general health and your circulation will improve.

J. T. I. Q.—What is the cause of premature grey hairs? I am only nineteen years old.

A.—Hereditary shock or severe illness will often cause premature greyness.

Mrs. N. S. N. Q.—What should a woman of 48, 5 ft. 10 in. tall weigh?

A.—She should weigh about 162 pounds. When I give these figures you will understand I am speaking about the average person. If these show you are a few pounds under or a few pounds over this weight you must not feel that fact has any particular significance. The figures, as I have said, indicated merely the average weight as discovered by the examination of a large number of persons.

THANK YOU. Q.—What do you advise for "pink eye"?

A.—"Pink eye" is due to infection, and should have proper medical attention and treatment. Have your doctor advise you.

WORLD AFFAIRS

December 17 was observed throughout most of South America as Bolivar day. One hundred years ago on December 17th Simon Bolivar died. He was in his early fifties, but he was as active and worn as if he had been an old man. He had devoted himself to freeing the South American colonies from Spanish dominion in a vow made dramatically in Rome in which he swore by the God of his forefathers. I swear by my native country, that I shall never allow my hands to rest until I have broken the shackles which chain us to Spain.

His father must have foreseen some of the things which would claim the boy's achievement for he named him Simon, "Simon Macca-bus, for I have an impression that he will prove the Simon Macca-bus of his country. Bolivar was more, much more, though his early youth ran the usual course of a wealthy boy and young man. He was sent to Madrid to complete his education. He met when 17 a young girl of high rank. On account of their youth the marriage was postponed a year. But when Bolivar and young Maria Teresa started to come back to South America Maria Teresa died on the long sea journey. This was in 1803. Bolivar returned to Europe. There he made his vow—in 1805.

On his return to his native Venezuela he headed the movement which had begun to actuate all South American colonies. This movement was successful, but Bolivar's dream went still further. It was that the whole American continent should work out some plan of developing, of working together. "A flexible union, presupposing no delegation of sovereignty on the part of any country belonging to it, expressing itself through a congress composed of delegates from all the free nations of America, in such a way as to lend strength to the whole,"—this was his dream.

In accordance with it Bolivar at last worked to the point where invitations were issued to the various "free nations" to meet on the Isthmus of Panama. "When a hundred centuries from now, posterity seeks the origin of international law," he said triumphantly, "it will respectfully consider the resolutions adopted at Panama. What will the Isthmus of Corinth then be compared with the Isthmus of Panama?"

But not all the American countries sent delegates. Little was accomplished. Yet it was the practical setting-up of an ideal. And that ideal is nearer completion today than in any of the hundred years since Bolivar's death. This Pan-American conference held in the first quarter of the nineteenth century pointed the way.

Bolivar himself was bitterly disappointed at the practical accomplishments of that meeting. He died a few years afterwards. His last words are said to have been, "If my death could bring union I should to down a tranquil man to my grave." And it has been stated that "every meeting of the Pan-American Congress is a tribute to his prescience."—E. F. Stratton.

NEW YORK

Day by Day

by O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—Thoughts while strolling: The Russian peasant blouses, debutantes wear. Violet Hering always looks as though she had just stepped out of the hair dressers. Those beamish folk with perpetual grins. Joe Urban's evening shirt suggest a concertina designed by the mad king of Bavaria.

Owen Davis, a Portland, Me. boy, who made good in the city. A British chap chirps: "It decidedly old hat!" The thin bracelets affected by leading men. Someone is always catching me talking baby talk to puppies along the street. But I turn it off into humming.

That blue steel look of Charles Mitchell, the banker. The 42nd street doorman who is the image of Sir Thomas Lipton. Herman Shumlin, the traveling man, who surprised the town as a producer. Fun reading the extravagant vaudeville posters in the Palace lobby. Ted Healy. Also from Ohio.

Peter Arno and Gene Tunney bear a resemblance. It's no longer "the 400" but "The Meadowbrook Clique." The prayer-on-the-head-of-a-pin man is back along library wall. Also Telescope Joe, who invites you to peek at Old Sirius, the Dog Star. Freuh, the caricaturist.

It's been a great year for shoe repairers anyway. Wonder if they have taken a roll call of magistrates lately? When Fred Allen plays a harmonica he attaches it to a chain. Taking no chances, the big mouth. No Broadway movie house puts out a bally-hoo like Loew's State's.

The sad, unworking look of the apple sellers. Dudley Field Malone has the pink checked chubbiness of a happy baby. And is almost a double for Winston Churchill. Pious who attend Evensong. The sudden bubbling of lights. Cosmo Hamilton wears a derby.

Critics now twitter about "Maurice Guest." This column cheered the tome 15 years ago. Not to read the latest dirty book these days is a social solism. Book publishers, like theatrical producers, are killing their business with obscenity. What became of the in foil collectors?

About the last of the burlesque booking offices holds forth on 7th avenue. Once they offered a picturesque touch of the Rialto. In cubicle rooms, loudly dressed showmen sat at battered desks. Variety and Billboard were conspicuously on file and the walls were scrofulous with advertising sheets—trick bicycle riders, jugglers, high-wire walkers and trained animal acts. The entrepreneur wore a fierce derby at an impudent slant and eternally chewed an equally fierce cigar. The one I dropped in on today ran to type. Coarsely, his suspender buckles bore the inscription engraved in chip jewels: "To Baby!"

Trick bicycle riding, I hear, is about finished. A few carry on at street fairs and carnival shows but only about a half dozen are doing the small time vaudeville circuits.

The booking agent used a term I never heard out in the brush. In his America but never New York. served: "It's a wow with the scissors-bills." It was explained a "scissors-bill" was a yap.

Burlesque chorus girls are difficult to find these days for trouping. Once there was usually a waiting line. Now they try for Hollywood movies or New York cabarets and can remain most of the time in either Hollywood or the metropolis.

While in the booking office an old timer drifted in. He wore a flowing Elbert Hubbard tie and across his giddy vest a watch chain carved of hickory nut shells. Most of his life was spent as an olio man with a rep show—doing feats of magic, a monolog or soft shoe dancing. He played in almost every small town in America but never New York. Past 60, he came several months ago looking for a Broadway break. Every day he visits the agency. New York!

"If you had not," writes P. G. C. "been brought up in the pig-rooting thickets you would never associate culture of any sort with New York. Anyone who has seen the world knows it is the most uncouth, vulgar spot on the globe."

O, yeah?—Ce sont des barbaras, lee New Yorkers! And we hope that spurt of French sends you spinning into what old time burlesque called a pratt fall.

IMAGINE YOURSELF on an unfamiliar highway at night in the country. You want to go to Allison. You come to a forked road. No signs! Which way? You turn left and come to a cross-road. No signs. You turn right. You come to a town. It proves to be Liberty. You go back to the fork and turn left. A mile or so farther on you come to another cross-road. A sign pointing right says "Allison three miles."

But for that sign-post you might have traveled miles—spent hours, and come short of your destination.

Al Palmer, Once Fields' Aid, Recalls Days Of Minstrelsy

Stage Director, Musician,
Composer Resident Of Salem Now

Will "Mistah Bones" ever be back? You know—that dusky, burned face, chuckling, light-footed fellow who cavorted before the footlights with Al Fields, Vogel, O'Brien and the other big-timers and little-timers of minstrelsy.

Maybe So, Maybe Not

Where once "Mistah Bones" and his companions joked before the footlights, the stars of stage and film now are speaking from the silver screen; there once minstrelsy's gaily spangled, effervescent terpsichoreans pranced, danced and swayed in the beams of the spotlight, now bevy of blond and brunet terpsichoreans are highly kicking; where once such never-to-be-forgotten tunes as "Silver Threads Among the Gold," and other such classics, as well as, perhaps, a "Sweet Adeline" or two thrown in, brought gales of applause from orchestra, gallery and gallery gods alike, now heart-throbbing theme songs and jazzy syncopeation burst forth from unseen "sax" and drums to silver and jolt the unsuspecting pulse.

Memories Remain

Doesn't seem possible, but maybe it's gone forever—the day of the genuine, old-time minstrel show, mourned by the veteran theatergoers who also thrilled in that period to the "I don't care's" of Eva Tanguay, and enjoyed the wit of Weber and Fields, Van and Schenk, and countless others. But memories will remain always with those who revelled with the black-face performers and, most of all, with those who had a hand in shaping this era of theatrical history.

From novice musician all the way to stage director for the Al G. Fields minstrel, with stop-overs at most of the important way stations in between—Al J. Palmer, musician and entertainer, who now makes his home in Salem, can be classified among the latter. He has seen it all, lived it all, and witnessed the big transition.

But in a little book of verse he's compiling—the rhythm of life he might call it—in which he records the story of his career, many of the bright spots are reserved for his days in minstrelsy.

Played In Boys' Bands

Palmer and a brother, as youngsters in Johnstown, Pa., were associated with the musical germ but the former's case perhaps was more pronounced. He played in the boys' bands of his time and never missed an opportunity to appear in home talent and other productions as genius budged. This eventually led to the stage.

He and his brother, Walter, were on the stage for quite a while as character impersonators and vocalists, known as the Palmer Brothers, their travels taking them far

William Boyd Weds Dorothy Sebastian

(By United Press)

LAS VEGAS, NEV., Dec. 20.—William Boyd, screen star, and Dorothy Sebastian, also of the films, flew here to be married yesterday and immediately after the ceremony, were to return to Hollywood. They were accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Adolph L. Shuler.

Boyd's first wife was Elinor Fair, who played with him in "The Volga Boatman," the picture in which he gained his first screen success. Their divorce was signed November 16. Miss Sebastian also had been married before.

Boyd recently changed his film name to "Bill" Boyd to avoid confusion which arose when William Boyd of the stage entered motion pictures.

LAKE ADVISORY BOARD PREDICTS BUSINESS BOOST

Decline Near End; Slow
Upward Curve In Sight

(By United Press)

BUFFALO, Dec. 20.—The 29th Great Lakes regional advisory board here has predicted a slow upward curve in the trend of business for 1931.

That depression had run its normal course and the country would see better times with the first of the year, was considered the opinion of the board as a whole.

Production Increase Looms

Clare B. Tefft, transportation commissioner of the Toledo, (O.) Chamber of Commerce and chairman of the Chambers of Commerce committee of the board, said: "Reports from many business concerns, including factories, building supply houses, shippers and railroads, indicate plans for an increased production in 1931. Because of this, and other features, we believe that the depression has run its natural course and that improved conditions are in sight."

"We do not anticipate any sudden increase in business but we do see a slow upward curve during the first quarter of 1931; which I consider the best."

Cities Examples

Tefft cited two examples of the increased confidence and expectations of the business man. He said that the New York Central railroad was now undertaking construction of extensive yard facilities in southeastern Toledo to handle the expected increased shipping during the first quarter of 1931. Tefft also said that industries in Toledo were completing plans for the expenditure of approximately $15,000,000 for expansion work during the first four months in 1931.

P. J. Parker, vice president of the First National bank, Detroit, in a message to the board, expressed the same views.

He said that the decline "is about at its end, if indeed the end has not been reached," and that the "upturn will be brought into evidence sometime during the first quarter of the coming year."

MAKES FINDING AGAINST MAYOR

Examiner's Report Shows
Liquor Drive Still Under Way

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS, Dec. 20.—The village of Bloomfield, Jefferson county, where Mayor W. A. McNary has been presiding for a number of years, still is crusading against prohibition law violators according to a report filed with the state bureau of accounting today by Examiner Walter C. Jones.

The examiner made a finding for $2,424.85 representing liquor fines which the mayor had not turned into the state, county and village, but which he later paid. At the same time the examiner made a finding for recovery totaling more than $2,000 against four detectives who had been hired by the mayor to aid in enforcing the prohibition laws. These detectives were non-residents and therefore could not accept fees which the mayor taxed against defendants for them.

The detectives and the amounts each are asked to return to the village are Richard Riser, $1,114.55; C. S. Harris, $887.20; C. E. Sergeant $142.50; Ben Deen, $41.60.

When the examiners made the previous examination back in 1926, they discovered that Mayor McNary had failed to turn into the state village and county treasuries $42,672. He paid the amount later, however.

Remains Of Czar And Family Sent Secretly From Siberia

Story Of Trip Of Roughly Bound Box Through Bolshevist Lines Is Told In
New York Times

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—An account of the shipment of the remains of Czar Nicholas II and his family out of Siberia under the protection of the American flag was published by the New York Times today.

Franklin Clarkin, former American consul at Harbin, Manchuria, was quoted by the times as saying the ashes of the executed Romanoffs were unknowingly spirited through the Bolshevist lines and carried to Harbin from Omsk on an American consular train late in 1919.

In Junior Vault

Thence they were trans-shipped to Shanghai, sent to an Italian port on the Gulf of Trieste and they now rest near Paris in the family vault of General Janin, French commander of the Czech Legionnaires in Siberia after the war.

A new book by Janin tells of the ashes being in the vault.

Admiral Kolchak, commander of the White Army, placed the remains in the care of Consul General Harris after his downfall at Omsk, says the Times, and Harris turned them over to Governor Horvath in Harbin without knowing the significance of his cargo.

With the White Army in retreat, the American train took aboard American nurses and refugees and their gruesome freight, and headed east toward Vladivostok. In spite of Guerilla warfare along the way, the party came through safely.

Pennies Heels Against Box

Bundled in furs, the consular attaches met the train in the yards and entered the consular general's car. Some one pounded his heels against a box to get warm and was warned jokingly.

The Times quotes Clark in at this point: "Odd baggage, it looked, roughly bound with ropes like an immigrant's trunk. After dinner we played poker at the table, the box interfering with our comfort, and listened to experiences and what souvenirs had been collected, for those aboard were to proceed (another week's journey) to Vladivostok for the allied 'kick-out' and home."

"Next noon Consul General Harris called at our quarters in old Harbin."

"Well, it's off my hands," he announced with unaccustomed solemnity. "That chest under my table. They took it away at midnight." "Shipping it home?" "Home? Home is no more for that. Man, what do you think was in it?"

"All That's Left of Czar"

"Sables for the daughter in Iowa, and of course, Samovars." "Kolchak sent it aboard. Nothing contraband, not even champagne, in it. He couldn't trust it to his trains, and it would be an act of Christian grace if I took it. Governor Horvath would call for it at Harbin. Well, Horvath's officers came for it and gazed at it, then at one another, then with peculiar deference at me. Four then bore it out. One came back, saluted and said:

"You not know what you have brought? You have brought, excellency, all that is left of the Czar and the imperial family of Russia!"

ACTRESS ASKED TO TESTIFY IN DEATH INQUIRY

Friend Of Slain Radio Announcer Tells Of "Party" Plot

(By Associated Press)

DETROIT, Dec. 20.—A burlesque actress who admitted, according to police, that her's was the voice which called Gerald E. Buckley to his death, will tell the 22-man Wayne county grand jury her story today, if her condition permits.

The actress is Margaret Owen, 22, who has been in the psychopathic ward of receiving hospital since Nov. 29, when she claimed she had been given poisoned whiskey to prevent her from testifying in another murder case.

Told to Call Buckley
Police said yesterday she said she had been prompted by a man whose identity has not been revealed to call the radio political commentator and invite him to a party. She said Buckley was to meet her in the lobby of the LaSalle hotel.

As Buckley was sitting in the lobby early July 23, two hours after he had announced the recall of Mayor Bowles, three men entered and fired 11 shots into his body.

Miss Owen, according to police had told the same man who had prompted her call to Buckley, 25 minutes before he was shot, insisted she not keep the appointment and that she did not go to the hotel. Police have refused to say whether this man is in custody.

Collapse In Theater

Two days before she was to have testified at the trial of Nicholas Dellabonta and Frank Salimone for the murder of two Grosse Pointe park policemen Miss Owen collapsed at the theater where she is employed. She claimed to have been given poisoned whiskey and later identified Dominick Ferris as the man who gave it to her, but physicians at Receiving hospital were unable to find any trace of poison.

They diagnosed her ailment as a form of hysteria, with which they said, she had long been afflicted, and she was placed in the psychopathic ward. She has been a patient there since.

HOLY TRINITY ENGLISH LUTHERAN

Rev. George D. Keister, pastor. (All services held at the Memorial building on East State street.)

Fourth Sunday in Advent. Sunday school 9:45 (Luke 2:1-20).

H. E. Smith, supt.

No other Scripture is as suitable for study and meditation at this season of the year than the Christmas story as recorded in Holy Writ. Years of repetition have not dulled the beauty and splendor of the history of the coming of baby Jesus as the Son of Mary and Son of God. The sweetness and winsomeness of this fact have been as bright stars that shine in the darkness of life. Happiness, joy and comfort have arrived with the birth of Jesus. Yes, and more. He is the only Saviour for a world dying in sin.

"Though Christ a thousand times in Bethlehem be born, 'If He is not born in thee, they soul is still forlorn.'"

Morning worship, 11. Sermon: "Preparing the Way for Christ."

It took long years for the proper time to arrive for Christ's coming. Many centuries had passed. Generations had passed away in death. Then the dawn of a new day was near at hand. A personal forerunner was sent to smooth the rough paths and to straighten the crooked roads. That was John the Baptist. He did prepare the way for our Saviour. This work today does not fall back entirely upon this prophet in rough clothing. It is the task of every Christian. Our own soul rooms are to be ready to receive the Christ. Others of humanity are to be prepared to receive Him. The way for Christ must be prepared.

CHURCH OF OUR SAVIOUR

875 East State street, Rev. Christian A. Roth, pastor.

Services Sunday Dec. 21, the Fourth Sunday in Advent.

Celebration of the Holy Communion, 7:30. Church school 9:30; morning prayer and sermon, 11.

Christmas services are as follows: Choral celebration of the Holy Eucharist Christmas Eve, beginning at 11:30. Plain celebration of the Holy Communion Christmas day at 11 a. m.

The time draws near the birth of Christ. The whole week is hallowed by the divine truth of the Incarnation, and the prayer that the Lord would raise up His power and come among us is an expression of our longing that He would come to teach each one of us and make His abode in our hearts. We are indeed sore let and hindered, but the message calls for lasting joy—"The Lord is at hand." How the great event has been the turning point of human history! Gained in his wonderful music for the Holy Communion has made these precious words of our Creed, "And was made Man," a mingling of mystery, adoration, love, and consecration of life, suggesting the peace past understanding which the Prince of Peace brought through the Incarnation.

The whole Christmas truth calls for faith a faith so full of loving adoration that we question not, but like the Shepherds and the Wise Men we worship and believe. The satisfaction of universal human longing has come. God is with us, our Emmanuel, and with us in such a marvelous fashion, being "made man" that all our ears and doubts are mastered. It is a time of faith. We become as little children, so full of happiness and peace that questionings die of their own weakness.

At the close of the church school period the Christmas banks, distributed several weeks ago, will be received at the altar where they will be built into a miniature church and their contents dedicated to the improvement of our church building.

SAN FRANCISCO — Although every one of the 36 freighters of the Reardon-Smith line bears on its stern the name Bideford, the line's home port, not one has ever been there. Capt. William Egerton of the Vancouver, when calling here explained the mystery. The Reardon-Smith family of England has lived at Bideford for years and Sir William named that town the home port of his line, although the water is too shallow in that vicinity for any of the ships to visit their home port.

AKRON, Dec. 20.—William S. Brock and Lee Shoenhar, well known pilots, have announced they will flip a coin to see which flies their "solution" in an attempt to establish a world record for land plane speed in an official National Aeronautical Association test here during the holidays. JAPAN PROTESTS CLOSING OF BANK

Discord Develops With Russia's Communist Leaders

(By Associated Press)
TOKYO, Dec. 20.—An international disagreement, which may have repercussions of a serious character, developed today between Japan and Communist Russia as a consequence of a Moscow order closing the Vladivostok branch of the bank of Korea yesterday.

The Japanese foreign office cabled the Japanese ambassador at Moscow to inform the Soviet government that Tokyo considers the closing an unjustifiable and unfriendly act, and to request withdrawal of the closure order. The message also asked that the Moscow government enter into conversations with a view to reaching an amicable settlement.

The Soviet embassy here meanwhile issued a statement explaining that the existence of the bank there was contrary to the Soviet economic policy. The statement emphasizes that the branch was the sole Bourgeois bank in Prussia. Permission for its operation, it was said, never was given by the Soviet government but only by the local authorities and the branch was characterized as having been a constant source of trouble.

The branch was closed yesterday after examination of its books last summer to determine if it had been guilty of exchange operations which were illegal under the Soviet laws. A fine of 2,600,000 rubles "duties" (about $1,300,000 nominal value)

Her son, Allan, is expected next week.

Will Be With Children

Mrs. Herbert Hoover Jr., is planning a flying visit from Asheville, North Carolina, to spend part of Christmas eve with her children now occupying a third floor nursery at the White House.

The cheerful word came to the White House that train connections would permit the younger Mrs. Hoover to tuck her three babies in bed at the White House on Christmas eve, after they had enjoyed their tree and toys, and still be with her husband at Blue Briar cottage on a Carolina mountain slope Christmas morning.

Mrs. Hoover's niece, Janet Large, will also be a holiday White House visitor. Attending an eastern school, she could not cross the continent to California where her mother, Mrs. Jean Henry Large, is now residing in the Hoover Palo Alto home.

Attends Benefit Sale

Ever gracious in aiding welfare work the president's wife already has attended a Walter Reed hospital sale of Christmas gifts made by disabled soldiers. Her pre-Christmas appearances will include the Salvation Army Christmas party and the Central Union mission Christmas tree, both providing well-filled hampers and gift bundles for poor families.

After she has watched her husband in the annual presidential role of lighting Washington's outdoor community Christmas tree, Mrs. Hoover will be free to serve as hostess at her own two Christmas parties. The Christmas eve party will be for "The White House family"—the president's own household, his secretaries, physician, and aides, with their sons and daughters. The invitation is dispatched to the youngest child of each family, who is asked to come and bring his brothers, sisters and parents along with him.

NEXT WEEK'S FEATURES

Series Of Outstanding Pictures Scheduled to Show in City:

Leading Stars Appear

Revival of Herbert Brenon's famous talking drama, "The Case of Sergeant Grischa," starring Chester Morris, Betty Compson and Jean Hersholt appears as the highlight in talking picture entertainment scheduled to appear in Salem theaters next week. The picture termed the greatest produced by Radio pictures, will be shown at the State Monday and Tuesday.

It is a revival of the drama which brought fame to Brenon exactly one year ago and is a vivid story of devastation wrought in Russia by the World War. "Temptation," a new vehicle featuring Lois Wilson and Lawrence Gray is shown one night only—Wednesday—at the State, with "Ladies Must Play," starring Dorothy Sebastian, who Thursday became Mrs. William Boyd, with Neil Hamilton, John Holland and Natalie Morehead. It is a drama concerning sophisticated society life.

Lytell At The Royal

Bert Lytell, creator of the famous "Lone Wolf" series of mystery dramas on the silent screen, makes his debut in a talking opus of the same group when he appears in "The Last of the Lone Wolf" and will be supported by Patsy Ruth Miller. The Lone Wolf's exploits reach their peak in this thrilling crook drama with a regal setting and a royal plot—the eternal triangle of the king, a queen an admirer—forming the basis for action.

Warner Baxter, Columbus, O., resident, has his greatest character role in "Renegades," the feature picture at the State Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Co-featured with Baxter are Myrna Loy, Noah Beery and George Cooper, the picture being set against thrilling scenes in the Sahara desert and the noted French Foreign Legion.

A western production, based on a Zane Gray novel, "Last of the Duanees," stars George O'Brien, Myrna Loy, Lucille Brown and Walter McGrail. It will be shown Thursday, Friday and Saturday at the Grand.

PRINCETON, W. VA. — Mrs. Helen Jeffcoat, Princeton, drank a bottle of "pop" last June and was horrified to find a dead mouse in the liquid. Circuit court here awarded her $1,000 damages for the mental and physical distress she says she suffered. The mouse preserved in alcohol, was shown at the trial.

MINNEAPOLIS—Though women have been eligible for jury service since 1921 in Minnesota, four counties of the state still do not list them for call, the Minnesota League of Women Voters has disclosed.
